Father Says the Man Who Was With Her Was a Friend Who Had Told Her He Had Separated From His Wife -Hoodiums Mob the Giri in the Streets

"Helen Brown, stenographer," who threw herself in front of a subway train at the Brooklyn Bridge station Wednesday night after a scene with the wife of her companion, is Miss Irene Helen Stockham of 128 Underhill avenue, Brooklyn, the daughter of Samuel F. Stockham, who has a ship chandlery at 44 Pearl street, Manhattan.

The telegram she sent from the Elizabeth street station after her arrest on a charge of attempting to commit suicide, addressed to B. Richards, 168 Underhill avenue, Brooklyn, bore a wrong number, but was delivered, as the girl wished it to be, to Mrs. Richards of 128 Underhill avenue, next door to the Stockham home. When Mrs. Richards took it to the Stockhams she learned that they had been notified from another source, presumably by the man who had deserted the girl upon his wife's

Miss Stockham, a slender, pretty girl, with light brown hair, wore an extra veil loaned by the police matron when she left the station house yesterday morning, accompartied by Detective Sergeant Hahn, to go to the Tombs police court. The cries of a crowd of hoodlums following the pair added to the young woman's fright. She seemed faint at the end of the walk. She held her hands in front of her wells as Hahn led tha way to the bridge.

Her father, who was already in court, went to her, kissed her and begged her not to faint. The examination by Magistrate Whitman was carried on in low tones. He read the formal charge.

"Did you attempt to kill yourself?" he added.

"No I did not " Min Starth

"Did you attempt to kill yourself?" he added.

"No, I did not," Miss Stockham replied.
"You haven't any reason for wanting to kill yourself, have you?" asked the Magistrate, kindly.
"No, sir; I was excited and hysterical."
"I will discharge you," said the Magistrate. "Give your name to the clerk."
She may not have heard the final order, for her father's arm was about her and he was drawing her toward the door. They hurried down the aisle and out the door, through the basement and into Franklin street, followed by more hoodlums. As the mob went up the hill toward Broadway a rumor was circulated that the girl was Nan Patterson, escaped from the Tombs. She and her father ran and boarded a Broadway car, bound north, but trucks got in its way and, to escape the hoodlums who were piling into the car, they got out and took refuge in a store at the corner of Canal street. From this they escaped by a back door, ran east to the subway station and took a train to the Bridge and from there a trolley car to Brooklyn.

They did not go home at once, for the girl

They did not go home at once, for the girl seemed on the verge of collapse and her father for refuge took her into the home of the Rev. F. Jacobson, pastor of the Swedish Evangelical Lutheran Church, at 490 Pacific street. Mr. Jacobson had never seen them before, but they asked him to let them stay a while until the girl could recover herself. Pastor Jacobson was naturally a bit puzzled until Mr. Stockham said to him:

"I will tell you a pitiful story. My daughter for some time has been receiving attentions from a man whom she supposed to be a most honorable man and in whom I had the utmost confidence. He told her that he was married, but had separated from his wife and soon would get a divorce from her. Last night he called to take my daughter to an entertainment in New York. At the Bridge station of the subway his wife met them and my daughter learned for the first time that the man had not been separated from his wife, but was living with her. In her hysterical condition she rushed from the platform, but I do not think she tried to end her life."

Miss Stockham and her father left the pattor's house at 2 P. M. and walked to their home.

The family physician of the Stockhams has been Dr. William H. Nafis of 426 Park for about four years, being treated for

Miss Stockham is 26. She has worked as a stenographer, although she was not obliged to earn her living.

Gallie Version of the Merry Villager in the Trunk Told in Vain.

Edna Merrill, the merry villager of a Broadway attraction, who was pushed into her own trunk while packing up to leave the boarding house of Joseph Frossard, in West Forty-fifth street, last Sunday, was cross-examined yesterday by Frossard's lawyer, and Frossard gave his version of the affair.

Miss Merrill was not in good humor when she reached the West Side court at 9 o'clock and found that the Magistrate had not arrived. Her discomfiture was not decreased when she learned that she would be compelled to wait until an unusually large number of persons who had taken overdoses of spring tonics were "Had you been told to vacate the room?"

"I had paid my rent and was going." "I want to ask you if you hadn't been making quite a lot of noise?"
Miss Merrill admitted that she had, but not on the night Froesard had pushed her into the trunk "I was leaving because he never had been nice to me, and his wife had butted in, too. She doesn't speak English, and so I never knew what she said, though I knew it wasn't nice by the way she said

Miss Merrill would not accept the apology, and the Magistrate held Frossard in $300 for trial.

FATE OF CORONER JACKSON. Motion for a New Trial to Be Passed On

To-day. After having been in the Tombs for nearly two months, Coroner Moses J. Jackson will know to-day whether he is to get a new trial without further appeals. Jacka new trial without further appeals. Jackson was convicted of bribery in soliciting $500 from Benjamin Reass, counsel for "Dr." John W. Alexander, to clear Alexander of a homicide charge. The maximum penalty is ten years and $5,000 fine. Frank Moss, counsel for Jackson, made a metion for a new trial, which, it is understood, will be denied when Jackson comes up for sentence before Recorder Goff to-day.

"Dr." Alexander was indicted yesterday for manalaughter and gave $3,000 bail. LIVE TOPICS ABOUT TOWN.

The young hopeful in a Brooklyn family has a scrapbook and is constantly on the lookout for colored pictures to put in it. The desire seemed to be a harmless one and it was encouraged until a few days ago. Then the groor delivered a case of assorted canned goods. The gay labels caught the eye of the young hopeful and he carefully tore them off and incorporated them in his scrap book. When the cook wants a can of soup now she is likely to open baked beans or preserved peaches. A strict censorship or preserved peaches. A strict censorship over the scrapbook has been established.

"The surest sign that spring has come." said a West Side housewife, "is the elevation of the vegetable stands to the sidewalk in front of groceries and meat shops. They have been hibernating through the cold weather in dark little cellar holes and cold weather in dark little cellar holes and you risked your life going up and down the stairs. Those Italians love the sunshine, and with the first warm days they put out their charcoal fires and come up into the air. They are all smiles now, and every woman that has to buy her own vegetables is glad to see the outdoor markets again.

"I want a bottle of limber oil," said the rheumatic customer to an uptown druggist this week. "Sorry, sir, but we don't keep it," replied the druggist. "Strange," said the customer, "I bought me immensely, but I have never been able to purchase any since."

"He probably bought his limber oil when the circus showed in his town," explained the druggist. "The canvas men, who have little to do in the daytime, go up to the better dressed boys and tell them mysteriously that they will get them a little of the same oil used by the acrobats and contortionists for, say, $2. Few boys can resist the temptation to make themselves star performers and they dig for the funds.

"What the canvas men give them is, of course, nothing but sweet oil with angle course, nothing but sweet oil with angle worms in the bottom of the bottle. Boys firmly believe it makes them more limber, but faith in its powers will hardly serve to loosen joints stiffened by rheumatism."

Even chickens are decorated now. In an uptown shop which caters to refined tastes there are daily exhibitions of what is described as "milk fed poultry." These spring chickens, which are meant as presents for the sick, are wrapped in white tissue paper and tied with red ribbons once their plumpness and tenderness have been proved by touch. They come from the farm on which they are raised with legs and wings tied down with red ribbon.

The teacher asked if there was any little girl in the room who could tell what disarrange meant. The word must have been unfamiliar, for several minutes passed before a little Italian raised her hand. She said she had heard her father say it said she had heard her rather say it early in the morning when he was light-ing the fire.

"And when it not light," she said, "I heara him say 'Damna disa range.'"

"What's the use bewailing the scarcity of the diamond back terrapin?" asked a sportsman who has a shooting box along the Seneca River, "as long as there are thousand of muskrats in the Montezuma marshes?

"Perhaps your susceptibilities are shocked at the idea of eating muskrat. They needn't be, for the muskrat has not the remotest relationship to the common rat family. Far from having the traits of a scavenger, his habits are the daintiest ever. He has a bath every few minutes, and when he dines, selects such dainties as sweet flag, fleur de lys and the bulbs of sweet hag, field de lys and the builds of pond lilles.

"The hind legs of a muskrat are as tender as they ought to be considering the animal's epicurean diet. Besides that, they have just enough gamy flavor to make them a most delectable morsel."

President Roosevelt's eulogy of the family doctor recalls the fact that, unnoticed by the general public, one of the special guests who sat by the President's side at a recent dinner he attended in this city was the old family physician, who had presided at the future President's birth, the venerable Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet. It is a family tradition among the Roosevelts that Theodore got his teeth so hard that Dr. Emmet had to lance his gums to help them through.

The certificates were given out by Chancellor MacCracken of New York University. As counsellor, Miss Isabella Mary Pettus called the names of the graduates. They rose, some gray, some golden haired, some slender and young and some not, but all capped and gowned. They marched upon the plant covered platform to a blithe march. The men who gallantly served as ushers had their hands full carrying flowers sent to the débutantes in law.

Counsellor Miss Eugenie Marie Rayé one of the class's lecturers, announced that the two scholarships, worth $200 each, maintained by the class in the regular law school of the university, were won by Miss Florence Edith Bruning of 72 West 114th street and Miss Lona Bartlett of 67 West Ninety-sixth street. The "Twentieth century essay prize," of $50, on the subject of "The Settlement of Disputes Between Capital and Labor by Compulsory Arbitration," was won by Miss Elizabeth B. Smith of Asbury Park. Miss Harriet L. Smith of the same place received honorable mention. The New York University Glee Club interspersed coon and other songs between the unmusical numbers on the programme. Prof. Joseph French Johnson, Dean of the School of Commerce of New York University spoke on the "Usefulness of Elementary Law to Women Occupving Business Positions."

"If you want to do business." said he, after defining business academically, "be a financier. If you would be a financier, you must know the rules of the game—the law. Otherwise you must have a lawyer, and he will take your profits.

A Fluted Column Whose Top Will Be 190 Feet From the Ground.

The Prison Ship Martyrs' Monument Association has at last adopted the plans and specifications for a monument to be erected in Fort Greene, Brooklyn. The association began its labors ten years ago. The monument is to cost $200,000. This amount has been secured, $25,000 raised by subscriptions by the association, $25,000 from the State, $50,000 from the city and $100,000 from the United States Govern-$100,000 from the United States Government. The plans adopted are those of McKim, Mead & White. The monument will be a large fluted column surmounted by a Greek tripod holding an urn. The base will be 45 feet high and the column 145 feet high. Work will be begun shortly. Stephen V. White is president of the association. SOME PURGERS OF THE BALLOT. Accuser of Court Clerk Arrested for Per-

Robert Bunoro, the Italian who figured conspicuously in some naturalization fraud cases a few years ago and was sent to Sing Sing, and later pardoned by President Roosevelt on recommendations from here in consideration of testimony against a certain innocent clerk in the United States District Court, was put under arrest vesterday by Assistant United States District Attorney Joel M. Marx and Secret Service Officer Dempsey P. Meetze on a charge of perjury.

Ever since his former arrest and pardon. Bunoro has been under suspicion as a dealer Jerry Re, charged with having dealt in citizenship papers, was being tried in the Criminal Branch of the Feberal Court, when Bunoro offered himself as a witness for the defence. In reply to testimony the latter arose and said that he never had had anything to do with Re. A half dozen witnesses were called upon, and all of them swore that Re and Bunoro had worked together in the sale of citizenship papers.

On the evidence given by them, Bunoro was arrested and held in $2,000 for examina-

Cosimo Ranalli, convicted of attempting to bribe a Secret Service officer in connecion with the naturalization frauds prosecu tions, was sentenced yesterday by United States Judge Thomas to a year and a half in Sing Sing Prison. Ranalli was employed in the Street Cleaning Department, and at the time of his arrest was a deputy State supervisor of elections. He is president of the street sweepers. dent of the street sweepers' union and one of the leaders of the Italian colony. A short time before election Ranalli offered a bribe of $200 to Daniel T. Callahan, a Sècret Service man working under orders from Joel M. Marx in the naturalization fraud cases, in consideration for which Callahan was to have sentence suspended in the case of Italians then under arrest. In his defence Ranalli admitted offering the bribe, but said it was demanded by Secret Service officers, that he did not, therefore, consider it a crime. He was taken

"Wouldn't it be better for some larger charity to set such a unique example?" she asked. "And whenever it is done it had better be early in the season. Now, you know people are tired and they have to be caught with bait."

The motion was lost by a large majority, and each woman as she left the meeting was told "all prizes for the euchre will be thankfully received."
